DETAILED ACTION

1. This communication is responsive to an amendment filed 5/25/07.
2. Claims 22-42 are pending in this application; and, claims 22, 29 and 36 are independent claims. Claims 22, 25-29, 32-36 and 39-42 have been amended; and, claims 1-21 have been canceled. This action is made Final.
3. The text of those sections of Title 35, U.S. Code not included in this action can be found in a prior Office action.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. Claims 22-25, 28-32, 35-39 and 42 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by UNIX Unleashed ("UNIX").

As per claim 22, UNIX teaches method comprising configuring a single computer to be concurrently and physically shared by multiple users by executing a plurality of concurrent switchable remote process enabled workspace environments within the single computer (page 20; multiple users share a single computer such as a server via, for example, terminals, the single computer is able to initiate remote processes) comprising presenting a logon UI to each user physically seeking to use the single computer and within the single computer initiating a separate remote process thread for each user that is authenticated by the logon UI, initiating a separate remote process associated with each remote process thread for the concurrent switchable remote process enabled workspace environments, displaying computer only one of the process enabled workspace environments as active at a time and maintaining a list of remote process threads to support switching from a first remote process to a second remote process (page 266; UNIX uses XWindow where users use separate threads to login).

As per claim 23, UNIX teaches method for use in a multiple user computing environment logon user interface comprising establishing a separate user environment associated with each remote process (page 81).

As per claim 24, UNIX teaches method for use in a multiple user computing environment logon user interface comprising launching a separate user shell associated with each remote process (page 266, and rlogin).

As per claim 25, UNIX teaches method for use in a multiple user computing environment logon user interface comprising selectively switching from a first one of the multiple remote processes to another of the multiple remote processes without terminating the remote process thread associated with the first one of the multiple remote processes (page 20).

As per claim 28, UNIX teaches method for use in a multiple user computing environment logon user interface comprising selectively removing the remote process thread from the list of remote process threads when the user logs off (page 24; wherein the shell or process is terminated).

Claims 29 and 36 are individually similar in scope to claim 22 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claims 30 and 37 are individually similar in scope to claim 23 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claims 31 and 38 are individually similar in scope to claim 24 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claims 32 and 39 are individually similar in scope to claim 25 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claims 35 and 42 are individually similar in scope to claim 28 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. Claims 26, 27, 33, 34, 40 and 41 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over UNIX Unleashed ("UNIX").

As per claims 26 and 27, UNIX teaches method for use in a multiple user computing environment logon user interface comprising switching from a first one of the multiple remote processes to another of the multiple remote processes without terminating a remote process thread associated with the first one of the multiple remote processes and launching a separate user shell associated with each remote process (pages 20 and 266). UNIX does not explicitly disclose automatically switching to a logon screen following a defined period of user inactivity. Official Notice is taken that automatically switching to a logon screen after a period of user inactivity is well known in the art. It would have been obvious to an artisan at the time of the invention to utilize the feature of automatically switching to a logon screen after a period of user inactivity with the method of UNIX in order to provide an added security measure of preventing others from viewing sensitive materials at a computing site in the event the user is no longer attending to the computing site.

Claims 33 and 34 in combination are similar in scope to the combination of claims 26 and 27 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Claims 40 and 41 in combination are similar in scope to the combination of claims 26 and 27 and are therefore rejected under similar rationale.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments filed 5/25/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argued the following:

In light of the amendments, applicant submits that the rejections under Unix is moot.

The Office disagrees for the following reasons:

Upon further review, it appears that Unix teaches a single computer such as a server that initiate remote processes through multiple terminals, the single computer concurrently and physically shared by multiple users (page 20). By "remote process", it appears applicant possibly meant local process. If this is the case, applicant is invited to amend the claim language from remote process to local process where applicable.

Furthermore, the Office notes that applicant did not contest the factual assertion set forth under Official Notice in paragraph two of section eight of the Office Action of 2/27/07.

Conclusion

7. The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Hickman (US 7,007,070 B1) teaches a method and apparatus for computing over a WAN.

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
